

The Do Not Call list in WI should not be made more lenient - in fact I would be in favor of tightening up restrictions on non-profit calls and calls from businesses I'm already a consumer with. If I am interested in any additional products or services from my current provider, I will contact them for availability. If they have something they would like to share with me, they can send it through the mail, which is much less intrusive. As for the non-profit pleas for donation, I personally do not trust them over the phone. My donations are made locally through my church or other agencies I know and trust. There is no need for relaxing the current no-call standard - it has been very nice the last couple of years without the constant interruptions all evening. And some of the callers had even replied to my "put me on your do not call list", with we don't do that or we'll only do that for six-months.
